HED 627 001  Capstone: Contemporary Issues in Student Affairs
Dr. Amanda Kraus
Wednesdays 4:15P-6:45PM
Highland Commons B116
This course is designed to serve as a capstone experience for master’s students in the last semester of their program, entering the profession of student affairs. Students will explore contemporary and professional issues with a critical lens. Course readings and discussions will encourage students to raise questions about professional practice, issues and trends. Students will have the opportunity to examine an issue of interest and present their findings in a professional symposium. We will often dialogue with guest speakers to gain firsthand insight into the profession.

HED 629 001  Whiteness and Higher Education
Dr. Nolan Cabrera
Mondays 4:15P-6:45PM
COE 320
When conversations arise regarding ‘diversity’ or ‘race,’ this usually implies a focus on People of Color. Generally absent is the subject of Whiteness. Within this course, students will explore the historical construction of Whiteness. Additionally, they will examine how this concept has evolved, been challenged, and continually reconstructed over the past three hundred years. Students in this course will gain an understanding of key concepts within Critical Whiteness Studies as well as the relevance of Whiteness to education. Finally, students will become engaged in several of the unresolved and ongoing issues regarding Whiteness, race, and education.
